Site Manager Renegade Rum Distillery

The Renegade Rum Distillery is one of the first all new distilleries to be built in the Caribbean in generations. The project is based at Conference, Grenada.

Designed to harmonise the best modern equipment with traditional distilling, it's an environmentally-friendly, state-of-the-art new distillery, using only fresh sugar cane to produce an uber-premium aged rum for export.

We are looking for a Site Manger to coordinate the activities of the distillery site during the construction phase of this project.

The role will require liaising closely with all the participants associated with such a construction project to ensure the project is delivered smoothly, on time and budget.

As part of the commissioning team you will work closely with all the specialist process, utility, electrical teams and engineers from Grenada and around the world.

We are looking for someone with a strong logical approach, excellent problem solving skills and highly effective organisational abilities. A natural leader, exceptional people and communication skills are essential. Several years project management experience is an advantage, ideally from a manufacturing, production or engineering background.

Once in full operation the Site Manager will be considered for the Distillery Manager role, part of the senior management team for the on-going operation of the distillery.

This is a perfect opportunity to be involved at the very start, to develop an empathy for this exciting project, and to secure an ongoing role as distillery manager of what promises to be a world famous rum brand.
